A BETTER PATIENT EXPERIENCE AT HUNTINGTON HOSPITAL WITH SEAM+ADVANTAGE

For more than 120 years, Huntington Memorial Hospital has been committed to serving the community of Pasadena, California with excellence, compassion, and respect. These priorities extend not only to providing the best patient care with the best outcomes, but also to making every detail of patient experience, in hospital, as beneficial as possible.

“We use Mannington Commercial products because they sell both carpet and hard flooring. So you get products that work together,” says Thomas Romeyn, Huntington’s Director of Plant Services. Working together, as it turns out, involves much more than coordination of styling. Mannington’s performance technologies also play an enormous role.

Mannington has leveraged its years of experience in manufacturing hard and soft surface flooring, to create Seam+Advantage — a process for chemically welding products together, eliminating the use of transition strips. Not only does this reduce the maintenance headache of cleaning underneath transitions, as well as the risk of bacterial growth, but it also reduces discomfort for patients.

“When you are in a wheelchair or on a gurney, and you go over a transition strip, you know it. If you are in our hospital for back surgery, the last thing you want is to go over a bump,” says Romeyn. “Not having transition strips was key for us.”

In Huntington’s facilities, Mannington’s heterogeneous resilient sheet called Realities is welded to Benchmark high performance broadloom carpet — creating truly seamless transitions from surface to surface.
